
Pains Around Her Heart

Tired Out After Doing Housework

Mrs. Henry Ranch, Mariel Lake, Alta., writes:—"Last fall I had had pains around my heart, and each morning, after doing a little housework, I seemed to get dizzy and feel all tired out."

Seeing that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills were good for these troubles I sent for a box, and after taking the Pills for a few days I felt a whole lot better. Since then I have had no return of the dizzy spells and pains around the heart."

British-U. S. War Debts.

At the time this article is written, President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt are in conference giving consideration to applications made by the British, French, and other Governments which are indebted to the United States for loans made by the latter during the war, for an extension of the one-year moratorium covering repayments granted last year, and generally for a revision of the terms of settlement of such debts.

Inasmuch as these enormous international war debts are admittedly one cause of the existing financial and economic depression affecting all nations, whether they are directly concerned as debtors or creditors or not, it is well that the general position in regard to these debts should be understood in its broad outlines.

The war debts of the nations of Europe to the United States total approximately $22,143,539,000, of which amount Great Britain owed $11,165,965,000, and has paid almost $2,000,000,000; France owed $6,847,674,000, and has paid $486,075,891; Italy owed $2,407,677,000 and has paid $97,584,422, with the smaller nations owing varying amounts. Repayment of these huge amounts were to be made within a period of approximately 60 years.

On the other hand, Germany was obligated to pay these allied European nations the sum of $26,377,000,000 during a like period of time. In other words, as Germany paid her debts to the Allies, they in turn could pay the United States. But Germany cannot pay; the whole world now recognizes that fact. So the Lausanne Conference last June, Great Britain and the other nations agreed to let Germany off for $714,000,000 instead of $26,000,000,000, provided the United States would radically reduce or cancel the war debts due to that country. This the United States has thus far refused to do.

The Allies carried on the war against Germany for three years before the United States entered the conflict. Some of them had completely exhausted their credit in those three years and would have collapsed, the result of which might easily have been a German victory. Great Britain came to their rescue. But while Great Britain could have continued to finance all her own stupendous war expenditures, she could not do so and at the same time finance her allies. So Great Britain borrowed from the United States and, in turn, financed these other allied countries. They cannot repay Great Britain, nevertheless Great Britain is obligated to repay the United States, and, as the above figures indicate, has been doing so. As a result Great Britain was drained of gold; had to go off the gold standard; and now, because of failure of Germany to pay her, or pay other European nations which are so heavily indebted to Great Britain, it is no longer possible for Britain to continue paying out to the United States when others are not, because they cannot pay her.

Furthermore, in the huge borrowings by Britain and other countries from the United States, the latter country did not actually lend them gold. What the United States Government did was to advance them credit whereby with to buy food supplies, munitions, raw materials and manufactures of all kinds in the United States. In other words, the money was practically all spent in the United States in enormously high war prices for farm products, in war-time wages to workers, in war-time profits to manufacturers and people generally. The people of the United States prospered while Europe was impoverished.

With the ending of the war, and the necessity of paying off these huge credits, the United States Government demanded payment in gold. The United States, we repeat, did not lend gold but sold supplies of all kinds on credit; then they refused to take supplies back in repayment but demanded gold. In order to prevent repayment in supplies they raised their tariff to prohibitive heights and shut out foreign goods. In so doing they killed off the export trade of the debtor nations, thus making it still harder, in fact impossible, for them to pay.

Great Britain has never defaulted in payment of its obligations to any one at any time. Reputation of obligations has never been countenanced by Great Britain, although it has been the victim of such practices by other countries, including several of the States of the United States. Britain has no desire to default now, and years ago offered to write off the debts owing to her if her own debts, created by borrowings to assist these other nations, were similarly written off. The world's financial and economic troubles today are not due to Great Britain, and had her advice and example been followed after 1918 there would be no trouble.

If the United States still remains adamant, if it refuses to cancel or very substantially reduce the amounts owing to that Government, and continues to insist on payment in gold, then, in our humble opinion, the stand to be taken by the British Government should be this: Payment in gold being impossible, and in view of the fact that the debt was created through the supply of goods produced or manufactured in the United States, thus creating employment and wealth in the United States, Great Britain should now offer to repay the United States by exactly the same method,—that is, by supplying the United States with goods produced or manufactured in Great Britain, or through services, such as shipping which Britain can supply, thus providing employment for Britain's unemployed, and producing wealth for Britain's overworked people and institutions.

Until the United States is prepared to accept such British credits in exchange for the credits extended to Britain, that is, to accept British goods and services in payment for the United States goods and services supplied, Great Britain, while not repudiating anything, would refrain from making any further payments in gold, and let the United States wait for any further settlement until that country is prepared to accept the same treatment from Britain that, in the hour of the world's extremity, the United States accorded to Britain. Could anything be fairer?

Canada At Geneva Conference

Delegates Gave Full Support To Every Constructive Proposal

Canada gave whole-hearted support to any and every constructive proposal for the limitation and reduction of armaments which was laid before the Geneva disarmament conference, Sir George Perley, who headed the Canadian delegation, informed the House of Commons, Sir George wrote to the House a letter which he wrote to Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, summarizing briefly the proceedings before the Geneva conference from its opening in February until the adjournment of the first session in July.

"The work of the first session cannot be considered an unqualified success, and yet it is not fair to say that nothing was accomplished," Sir George informed the Prime Minister. The ordinary complexities of disarmament, he said, were complicated still further by several special events which added to the difficulties of the delegates in reaching agreement. The situation in the Far East, and the "exigencies of politics in certain European countries" were among factors. "As a result not as much was accomplished as was hoped for," Sir George wrote.

Sir George was accompanied to the conference by Hon. Maurice Dupre, solicitor-general, and Miss Winifred Kydd, president of the National Council of Women. To both of his colleagues he paid tribute on the floor of the House. "There were only two ladies who were full delegates to the disarmament conference," he wrote the Prime Minister, "and we are proud of the fact that one of them was a Canadian."

Subjects of great importance will be considered at the next session of the conference, Sir George informed the Prime Minister in his letter. "There is reason to believe that if the views of Germany and France can be reconciled, decisions for far-reaching importance may be taken at the forthcoming conference," Sir George wrote.

A Great Natural Port

West Should Use Every Legitimate Means To Attract Investment

The port of Churchill needs today accurate publicity well distributed in Great Britain, New York and eastern Canada, E. Cora Hind, commercial and agricultural editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, said in an address before the Winnipeg real estate board and the On-To-The-Bay Association.

Miss Hind urged her audience to work to induce western boards of trade to send a strong delegation to meet the first boats coming in next season and make a real occasion of it. She also urged preparation and distribution in Britain and eastern Canada of statements as to the advantages of the bay route, avoiding any exaggeration.

"Every effort should be made," she said, "to induce western merchants to order goods brought in by that route. All ships coming in next season should have some inward cargo." "Churchill is a great natural port, the Hudson Strait is feasible and can easily be made more so and for a longer season, but the work must be done from the west; the east will hinder, not help."

King George and Queen Mary Enjoyed Meeting Helen Keller

Their kindly majesties of England, the King and Queen, never performed a more gracious act than, when they received informally Helen Keller, the marvelous deaf and dumb and blind American woman, who has surmounted her terrible handicaps in such a wonderful manner. And their kindness was well repaid, for after conversing with Miss Keller, they marveled at her attainments just as have all of us who never had the privilege of meeting her.—Boston Post.

I have not altered my diet at all, and I only take a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning. I also find Kruschen very good for biliousness, from which I used to suffer a great deal. But it has completely left me now—in fact, I feel a different person, and have only to thank those wonderful Kruschen Salts.—(Mrs.) M. K.

Thinks Canadian Fox Ranch Will Disappear

Fur Importers Predict Its Merging With General Farm

Complete disappearance of the fox ranch in Canada is predicted by Leon Chapal, managing director of Les Magazines Generale de Marche Francaise, fur importers. Mr. Chapal feels that fur farming will become merged with general farming, as there is not sufficient man to make it worth while for a man to devote his whole time to it, while it fits in admirably with mixed farming.

Mr. Chapal was in Montreal en route to Prince Edward Island to make a survey of the fox ranching industry there. No competition exists between Russia and Canada, he said, as the furs produced by the two countries are of different types. Canada deals in silver fox and other furs of this variety, while Russia, produces white fox as astrakhan.

All Canadian furs, except the small quantity bought in the Dominion, are purchased by Parisian interests, Mr. Chapal said. Even Americans are buying Canadian furs in Paris because they find that the furs in August and September of this year have never before in its 40 years of existence.

Whistling Pigeons

Birds Used By Ontario Provincial Air Force To Carry Messages

Travelers in the north woods of Ontario next summer may be astonished when they hear and see what they may take to be a new species of bird, and into their heads may pop visions of whistling swans and wild pigeons. They may see the birds, real pigeons, and hear the whistle, but the two are separate entities, joined it is true but only for a space and then to carry out an idea.

Next spring, after a period of training, teams of homing pigeons will be transported to various fire patrol points where communication by wireless is now difficult or impossible. Reports of fires, forced landings and important messages may be relayed by the use of these birds to the base camps of the Provincial Air Force. The whistle! Boost Woolen Trade

Believes New Trade Agreement With Britain Will Be Beneficial

Both Canadian and British woolen manufacturers should enjoy greater business in the Canadian market, in the long run, as a result of the changes in the textile tariffs affected by agreements at the Imperial Conference, declared H. Barrett, of Toronto, in his presidential address to the annual meeting of the Canadian Woolen and Knit Goods Manufacturers Association.

Addressing the members who had gathered from all parts of Canada, Mr. Barrett devoted the greater portion of his address to the Imperial Conference and its effects on the woolen industry.

"The improvement of Great Britain's position in the Canadian market," he said, "will be partly at the expense of employment in the Canadian mills and partly at the expense of mills in non-empire countries. But, as the preferences on our primary products become effective the market in Canada for wool products should increase so that the total effect should be to increase business done in Canada by both Canadian and British mills."

CHAPTER 11.
A Northern Man

At Fort Endurance, in his big three-roomed cabin overlooking the rest of the post, Alan Baker was changing uniform and making himself regimental again, after a four-day patrol to a camp of drunken Hares.

Just turned thirty, tall and lanky and powerful of body, Baker had shaken off the last vestige of an unhappy boyhood and his three harrowing years across. He was in the prime of virile and hardened manhood. Coming here to Endurance as a corporal seven years ago, with Jimmy Montgomery and Curt Spaulding as his constables, he had speedily showed his worth as a "northern man" and a detachment leader able to cope with frontier problems. To him it was like coming into his own. In his boyhood he had daydreamed of hunting big game, and here, at this post just beneath the Arctic circle, these daydreams had been realized, though in a strange way. For here he had hunted the biggest of big game—human game that had intelligence to match against his; that carried a rifle in its hands, and wore a belt-gun, and must be captured alive, at risk of his own life.

During the years that he had been officer commanding here, he had built up an enviable reputation. With his gradually increasing pack of northern men he had successfully fought his big territory through Indian troubles and epidemics, and had smashed those lawless elements that came in with the oil-prospecting rushes farther south.

With a record like that and with Superintendent Williamson as his friend, Alan had expected to get his commission last fall when the post was raised to an inspectorate. No one in all the Three Rivers country doubted that Baker would be the chosen man. To them, to Alan, the blow came unexpectedly. A political appointee named Haskell, a newcomer to the Force, a worse than raw newcomer to the North, got the inspectorship and command of this coveted detachment.

In these last months, Alan had been very thoughtful about his future. Here, at thirty, he found himself in a blind alley, a non-com on meager pay, with no hope of promotion. He had turned down the opportunity of going into a big mining company that was prospecting by planes through Athabasca country. He had refused half a dozen offers that held prospect of advancement and fine money. And then the Force that he had given such loyalty to had betrayed him. Worst of all, most stinging of all, he was forced to manage this territory still, straightening out the mistakes and enduring the arrogance of the man who had got the place he himself had earned.

As he brushed his sandy hair and dressed quickly, Alan's glance strayed down the slope to Mrs. Drummond's flower garden. Elizabeth Spaulding, his fiancée, the sister of his dead partner, was there.

Inspector Haskell was there with her, that blue and gold of his uniform, through the shrubbery. Alan wondered how many hours Haskell had spent with Elizabeth in these last four days.

Commanding all the other buildings at Fort Endurance, Alan's cabin, which he and Curt Spaulding had built for themselves one summer, was light and airy, homelike with fireplace, bookshelves, radio, flower pots on the ledge, and comfortable with good furniture which Jimmy Montgomery had turned over to him when Jimmy's young wife died. But in spite of its comforts after barrack life, the cabin was lonely to Alan. Eighteen months rolling by had not made him forget a dead partner. Every log and every nail in the building held some memory of Curt Spaulding; and Curt's picture, his chevrons, his empty gun, were poignant reminders of that fatal patrol a year ago last January.

When he finished dressing, Alan stepped over to a deep alcove, a sort of library and study—a tiny niche for a man so tall and lanky. Above the work table hung a shelf of dog-eared books and three pictures framed in carved walrus ivory. One was of Elizabeth Spaulding taken two years ago when she came down north to this Waterways country to live with Curt, her brother. Another was of Jimmy Montgomery in jaunty "walking-out" uniform, taken before Jimmy got his real deal from headquarters and bought out of the Mounted.

The third was of Curt Spaulding. And that picture, flanked with the chevrons and the belt-gun, hung more prominently than even the other two, as though, with that face always in front of him, Alan felt less lonely for his dead partner and could imagine Curt here in this cabin still.

"If I'd Repulse Him, He'd-Take It Out on You!"

In Curt's death he had lost the best and truest friend he had ever had or ever would have; and he knew that through all the years of his life he would be lonely for that strong hand-clasp and a voice he once had known.

From a pigeonhole between two logs—a secret mailbox for himself and his hard-working men—Alan pulled out a scrawled note from Corporal Bill Hardsock. He had to smile as he read, for the note was so like Bill.

"Somebody found an awfully dead Snooky on a mud bar down river this side the Big Alouksa. Alan. He probably got drowned in the break-up but I'm going down to see who he is so's he won't be drawing treaty money by proxy for the next 20 years."

Alan sat down to write out the report of his last patrol. But his thoughts strayed to Elizabeth in the garden; to Haskell, there with her. He knew that these trips he constantly was sent on, these trivial assignments that took him away for days at a time, were deliberate on Haskell's part, to get him out of the road. With anger at this gross abuse of authority, he thought: "If Haskell could come within a mile of managing this post himself, he'd frame some detail to keep me out in the bush altogether. Any person who'd wield his official power in a personal matter like this . . . They used to cut off a knight's spurs with an axe!"

There was little passion in Alan's emotions toward Elizabeth, but there was a sturdy loyalty and a certain blind idealization of her as a girl. In that fatal patrol he and she, had suffered a mutual loss of partner, brother. During the eighteen months since then, he had been her only friend here at Endurance, for even Mrs. Drummond, with whom she was living, did not like her. To have a girl so dependent upon him, not only for friendship but for maintenance itself, aroused a very tender and protective attitude in Alan.

But at times, deep in his heart, he was troubled about his engagement to Elizabeth. At times the fear rose in him that their marriage was going to be a terrible mistake. Something lacked in their betrothal; they weren't the deep and intimate friends they should be.

It shocked him to realize he was going into marriage with a girl knowing he did not love her wholeheartedly. In brooding hours, when he thought of another girl in his life, of Joyce MacMillan and his comradely intimacy with her, the old longing for that deeper and richer relation surged through him. He grew bitter at the secret powerful circumstances which had separated him from Joyce; which he kept locked within himself, telling no one, neither Joyce nor Elizabeth.

Father Claverly, alone of all the people at Endurance, knew that there was something back of that engagement which Alan had kept to himself—some hidden reason, some unalterable fact, that would explain it. At first he had thought that the profound shock of a partner's death had caused Alan to turn to Elizabeth; but with the passing months he became convinced the reason was not that. It was something deeper and more lasting.

With infinite sorrow Father Claverly had seen Alan's fine comradeship with Joyce break up and had watched the engagement come about. He saw that Elizabeth was a wise, cool-headed girl, very clever at managing relationships for her own ends. In the good priest's opinion the marriage of this cool-headed, calculating girl to a man so sincere and warm-hearted, would be a sorry, sorry pass.

When Elizabeth came in the door, she merely nodded to Alan's warm greeting. In her precise tones she said:

"I want to talk to you, Alan, about something very important to us both. Unless you're too busy . . ."

Her rebuff hurt Alan. Her coldness, her lack of any passion, were always bewildering to him.

Waiting, painfully aware he could never answer her arguments, he glanced out the window at the river and shimmering pine hills. A mile down the broad Mackenzie a canoe, a small patrol craft with outboard motor, came whipping around a headland.

Alan thought: "That's Bill Hardsock coming. And coming wide open. Something's happened."

Elizabeth saw the craft, too. But she glanced only once at it, entirely uninterested. Police work—patrols, arrests, map surveys, treaty money, petty to be despised, bickering Indians—all this bored her, now that the novelty of it had worn off.

She loved Alan—with reservations. She admired his natural-born leadership over other men; admired his rugged honesty, especially in contrast to Haskell's lack of it. In their life together Alan would always be loyal to her; she could always depend upon Alan Baker. And he could get her what she wanted of life. Much better than he himself did, she realized he had qualities that would take him far in any other profession; a good intellect, ambition, the ability to work hard, and—most valuable of all—a rare capacity for friendship.

All in all, Elizabeth felt that if only he did not choose to bury himself here in this northern backwoods Alan Baker liked by far the likeliest man, of the four or five she had known well, to lift her out of genteel poverty to a more agreeable plane of life. (To Be Continued.)

THE TEACHER

There's much to learn from laughter
We could not learn from sighs
For mirth is kin to morning
And radiant rosy skies.

And laughing lips are wisest;
They speak no bitter word,
But bring our gladness winging
To heaven like a bird.

For joy can win us friendship
And love which will abide
Long after cold learning
From out our thoughts has died.

Oh, laughter, merry teacher,
Do not forsake us long;
But bring our ways to brighten,
Your younger brother, Song!

There's much to learn from laughter
That tears could never give,
For laughter lends us courage
A fuller life to live!

Despite the fact that the number of fur farms in Canada increased over one thousand to a total of 6,524 for 1930, the total value of investment in land and buildings, $5,583,846, was $5,000 less than the preceding year, and the value of fur-bearing animals at $16,197,747 was $5,000 less than the value in the preceding year. The fur industry is rapidly expanding throughout the Dominion and much valuable assistance to it is given through experimental and research work carried on under the direction of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Bristol, of New York, president.

A large percentage of the increase, he said, was attributable to improved conditions in the trades reporting the rise.

Bristol further revealed that 35 per cent of the concerns represented at the convention have planned to increase their advertising appropriations in 1933, while only 22 per cent have planned to decrease these expenditures.

Developed By Chinese

Grapefruit Was Hardly Edible Three Thousand Years Ago

Grapefruit which is now such a popular article of diet, was developed by the Chinese some 3,000 years ago from one of the wild citrus trees with which their country abounds, and whose natural fruits are small and hardly edible.

In the eighteenth century it was taken by an Englishman, Captain Shaddock, to the West Indies and grown there with success. Thence it spread to the United States, where fruit-growers have given it much attention and have improved it considerably.

Canada's Aspen Poplar

Is One Of Mostly Widely Distributed Trees In Dominion

Aspen poplar is one of the most widely distributed trees in Canada, being found in every province of the Dominion. Its northern limit extends almost to the Arctic ocean, at the Mackenzie delta. From the wood of the aspen are made excelsior, boxes and barrels for foodstuffs, and certain kinds of woodpulp. Lumber made from it is difficult to season and very perishable. In the prairie provinces it is an important source of fuel. — Forest Service, Department of the Interior.

Taking Safe Course

"Will you try some of my angel cake?" asked the young wife of her husband.

"No, thank you," was the reply.

"Are you afraid it isn't good enough?" she asked.

"No, I'm afraid I'm not good enough."

"Good enough for what?"

"Good enough to become an angel."

Little Helps For This Week

"Perplexed, but not in despair; cast down, but not destroyed."—Psalm 94: 19.

Discouraged in the work of life, Disheartened by its load, Shamed by its failures or its fears I sink beside the road— But let me only think of Thee, And then new heart springs up in me.—S. Longfellow.

Never let us be discouraged with ourselves; it is not when we are conscious of our faults that we are the most wicked; on the contrary, we are less so. We see by a brighter light; and let us remember for our consolation, that we never perceive our sins till we begin to cure them.—Fenelon.

Wise mothers who know the virtues of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator always have it at hand, because it proves its value.

Aluminum is more abundant throughout the world than any other metal. It forms about eight per cent of the earth's crust.

Rents have risen 70 per cent in Copenhagen since 1916.

Bones of the average man weigh 25 pounds.

In a game at Holden Thursday evening the Irma hockey team lost by the score of 2 to 1. According to spectators Irma should have counted up a win, but a couple of lucky goals put Holden in the win column. The Irma team is going strong.

Make a date right now and come join our club. The more the merrier, to the Merry-makers' whist drive and the women's institute bazaar on December 3rd was quite a success considering the scarcity of money. About sixty dollars was cleared.

Old man winter is certainly doing his stuff this week, not being satisfied with giving us lots of frost he has sent along a good stiff breeze as well for good measure.

We understand E. R. Frickleton of Wainwright has gone to Edmonton to have an operation this week. Mr. Frickleton is a brother of W. N. Frickleton, Irma druggist.

RADIOGRAMS

San Francisco gave us this one yesterday, "I want to know how you get down from an elephant." A ladder? A pole? Jump? "No, you get down from a goose."

Every Monday and Friday, at 5.30, CKUA, Prof. de Savoye, gives us lessons in French phonetics. This is a wonderful opportunity to brush up on this feature of the language. Students should recognize the wonderful opportunity of learning from a Frenchman. The university is performing a real service in this. And it is free.

"My girl thinks I am a treasure." And he swelled with pride. "The time will come when she will think you are a treasure. Then you had better watch out."

Housewives appreciate the programs that come every morning from the Calgary stations. While the housework progresses, the radio cheers and brightens. The snappy music with the added touches of the NBC programs tends to remove all thoughts of the depression as well as the drudgery of home duties.

"I knew that was angel cake, the moment I tasted it." "Why did you think so?" "Oh, I felt my prospects were good of becoming an angel."

It is the advertising that enables the radio stations to spend the millions of dollars in programs for our entertainment. The extravagant claims made at times for certain programs, through the voice of the radio, borders on what may be termed false. When using newspapers, such claims are not placed in print, for a censorship prevents the public from deceptive advertising in this medium. No editor will permit a merchant or manufacturer to insert in his paper an untrue claim. But over the air, almost anything goes. Just listen to what is said about some brands of tobacco dentifrice—or coffee.

"I was suffering from insomnia, and so I called the doctor. He always strikes right at the root of the trouble. So I gave him the address of the people living upstairs—a baby."

George: "I love a girl more in December than I do in November." Bill: "How come? I do not see that the month has anything to do with love." George: "Sure it has. There is one day more."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere gratitude to all who so generously supplied us with wood and who also helped saw it up and particularly the belated boys who supplied the engine and saw.

THE MAN BEHIND.

There is a man behind the counter, and the man behind the gun; the man behind the buzz saw, and the man behind his son; the man who is behind the times; the one behind his rent; the man behind the plowshare, and the man behind the fence; the man behind the barn and the man behind the bars; the man behind the kodak and the man behind the cave; the man behind his whiskers, and the man behind his fist, and every man behind a thing is entered on the list. But they've skipped another fellow of whom nothing has been said—the man who is even a little way ahead; who always pays for what he gets, whose bill is always signed; he's a long sort more important than the man who is behind. All the editors and merchants and the whole commercial clan, are indebted for existence to this good and noble man. He keeps us all in business and his town is never dead. And so we take our hat off to this man who is ahead.
